WHAT IS A BROWNFIELD?

A Brownfield site is a property where actual or perceived environmental contamination complicates its expansion, resale, or redevelopment. Sites can be contaminated with hazardous substances such as petroleum, pesticides, metals, asbestos, and more.

In October 2021, the City of Titusville received a 3-year grant in the amount of $300,000 from the U.S. EPA for a community-wide assessment of brownfield sites. funding can be used for Phase I and Phase II environmental site assessments (ESAs), clean-up planning, and community outreach activities. There is little, if any, disagreement that the redevelopment of brownfield sites is a huge positive for the community and the environment, but they first must be identified.
